

President Taft Says of Education:

*The White House,
Washington, June 29, 1909.*

Editor Times-Dispatch:

The clear, straight thinking which a thorough education tends to develop in any one fitted to receive it must form an antidote to the wiles of the irresponsible demagogue and the dangerous fads of the muddy-minded emotionalist who is frequently as dangerous as men of less worthy intention.

WM. H. TAFT.

Vice-Pres. Sherman Says of Education:

*U. S. Senate,
Washington, June 28, 1909.*

Editor Times-Dispatch:

"What does education stand for?" I answer, everything. It civilizes, Christianizes, elevates and ennobles. It broadens the field of opportunity, brings a greater material return for human effort and brings enjoyment to the discharge of duty.

JAMES. S. SHERMAN.
